those who contend for the boss and spoils system. If they content themselves with grambling and threatening, at they have done hitherto during four years past, all will work smoothly enough. Conking's "war" roles and thunders in the index, but doesn't much alarm anylhody. Still, it is apparent that the spoils system will make another vigorous effort to re-cover lost ground. This administration must put it down, or be ruled by it. But the degrading and corrupt system which treats the public offices as the perquisites of senators and representatives to be parcelled out among their personal followers and hirelings, will not be tolerated by the republican party, let the administration deal with it as it may. The republican party will be strong as it handles this question in the right way, and weak as it may surrender to oligarchies and rings of pro-fessional place-hunters who, under the head of some autocratic boss like Conkling or Cameron, or some imitator of their methods like Hipple-Mitchell, seek to control the whele machinery of nerve execution. Hipple-Mitchell, seek to control the whele machinery of party organization for ends of settish ambition and personal gain.
